GOPHER POISON

The Councillors of the Municipalities of Sounding Creek and Coltholme have again favored us with their order for Gopher Poison.

It will be well for farmers to get their supplies early and use it early, remembering that Poison used directly gophers come out will do more good than ten times the quantity later on.

A GOPHER PROBLEM

Given one pair of Gophers three months old on 1st January, 1910. They breed and in three months produce three pairs, and every three months thereafter three pairs are produced. Each pair of young in their turn at six months of age produce three pairs, and three pairs every three months thereafter. In two years time how many gophers will there be if none have died or been killed in that period?

To Place All on Equal Basis

The great crisis through which the world is now passing has served to emphasize among a great many other things the axiom that responsibility is the price of liberty. Because equal privileges are enjoyed by all citizens of Canada, it is the duty of our Government to see, as far as it is able, that all are made to bear equal sacrifices. That the Dominion's War Government is not unmindful of its duty in this respect is evidenced from the care that is being taken to ensure the equitable administration of the Military Service Act. Questionnaires are about to be addressed to all exempted men so as to permit of a checking of the decisions in the case of each to the end that uniformity be established in the application of the legislation. These questionnaires must be returned promptly upon penalty of forfeiture of the exemption papers previously granted. Exempted men should notify the registrar of their district of any change of address, as non-receipt will be regarded as constituting failure to return questionnaire properly filled in as required. The Government is determined that the Military Service Act shall be administered fairly, and in this determination they will have the active support of all followers of democratic ideals.

Immediate steps are to be taken to call up category "B" men as rapidly as possible. It is said that a large number of the men will receive notices in a few days.

Not Wanted in Canada

Knighthoods are not to be despised, and if given with care and for merit, are not incompatible with our democracy. But for the sake of common sense and a decent regard for what the institution stands for, don't let us be conferring them upon every Tom, Dick and Harry who happens to have social pretensions. As for hereditary titles, however, it is responsible for them should be plainly told that they are not wanted in Canada.—Ottawa Journal.

STORMY WEATHER

HARD ON BABY

The stormy, blustery weather which we have during February and March is extremely hard on children. Conditions make it necessary for the mother to keep them in the house. They are often confined to overheated, badly ventilated rooms and catch colds which rack their whole system. To guard against this a box of Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in the house and an occasional dose given the baby to keep his stomach and bowels working regularly. This will not fail to break up colds and keep the health of the baby in good condition till the brighter days come along. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Birds as High Fliers

The Airman Has Still Something to Compete Against

Most unknown and wonderful that aviators fly at 10,000 feet, and you know that this is by no means a recent height, and that a common one is anything between 2,000 and 5,000 above the level of the earth. Compare the airplane to a bird. Even the swallows that chase each other and trill on a summer evening at what seems a great height are seldom more than 300 or 400 feet high, and the hawk winnowing the air above a wood ready to pounce is seldom more than 200 feet. We speak of the skylark "lost in the blue" but we must remember that a skylark is about nine inches across the wings, while a plane is 40 feet, and the best lark that ever flew, ornithologists say, never mounted more than 500 feet, unless he started from the top of a hill.

When migrating birds fly at more considerable heights, but it is evident that it is not a great height, seeing that large numbers of them fly against coastwise fairs, and even probably migrate at a height of over 1,000 feet, and wild swans, ducks and geese are said to fly at heights up to 2,000 feet. The condor in his native wilds does not give much chance to the observer, but this great naturalist Humboldt, avowed that he was quite comfortable at a height of five miles and travelers in the Andes, who themselves have been over 20,000 feet up in the mountains, have seen him come into sight out of the heavens above their heads. So the airman has still something to compete against.

War and Food No. 10—VEGETABLES

Generally speaking, people are more inclined to eat vegetables in summer than in winter. For one thing they are not so easy to get; for another thing, the system does not seem to demand them to the same extent.

To stop using vegetables in winter is to deprive the body of the best of tonics and, in war time, it means using more than one shovelful of other foodstuffs which ought to be going overseas.

It is patriotic to eat vegetables. It means that you save meat and wheat. When you eat potatoes and carrots and onions you are not depriving the soldiers of anything, but you are saving meat and flour for them.

In Canada great quantities of vegetables are grown. On the farms especially the cellar is usually well stocked in winter with potatoes, carrots, onions, turnips and cabbage.

Great variety can be given to the daily menu by the use of vegetables. They are excellent for the children, more especially if they are masked and put through a sauce.

Comes over people as spring approaches due to lack of vegetables, which contain much mineral matter, are invigorating and serve as a tonic to the system.

The winter vegetables are particularly good when combined with meats to make savory stews. Who could conceive of a winter's day without its quota of carrots and onions?

The winter vegetables lend themselves to many forms of cooking. They can be steamed, baked or fried. They can be used in stew, with soup or covered with a simple sauce.

The water in which vegetables are cooked should never be thrown away. It can be saved for soup or gravy. It is best of all to bake or steam the vegetables. Then the valuable salts are not wasted.

It is a patriotic duty to eat vegetables. It is a rule that both the farmer and the city dweller may safely follow.

Germany's Economic Resistance

The Secret of Much of Germany's Resisting Power

The inherent resisting power of Germany has been a factor in her success in the first, though, for in the first or even the second year of the war few could have foreseen the growing strength of the allied forces. No greater blow could have been struck against the economic resistance of Germany than the blockade now enforced by American against the northern neutrals, for in the freedom of trade between neutral ports is found the secret of much of Germany's resisting power during the past three years.

Millionaire Means Varied Amounts

It Depends Altogether on Where You Are Living

America has always been conceded to be the land of the millionaire, just as it is popularly supposed to be the land of material opportunity. As figures talk, the claim has never been disproved. Now the world is startled by the most recent financial returns attesting to American prosperity and showing that the nation actually had an increase of many thousands in the ranks of Croesus and Midas during 1916.

The whole point in this census of wealth revolves round the question of what is a millionaire? Wasn't it Mark Twain, who when entertaining two or three friends to a simple restaurant lunch in South America, was alarmed to find himself bankrupt on receiving the waiter's bill in hundreds of thousands of Portuguese reis, until a lengthy computation revealed the amount to be equal to a few dollars. A man in England is not a millionaire until he has five times the amount required to make him one in America.

France has already one without five times less than the latter. In Germany, on the other hand, a man has reached the millionaire ranks with an amount equivalent to twenty times less than that required in America.

And as for the countries where Portuguese coinage is current, one is overwhelmed at thought of the stupendous wealth in reis which a "good" conductor of the world's mightiest railway could possess. He might, presumably, still bill for 5,000,000,000 reis in his vest pocket, merely to buy his way out of the country—and well, where would a Rockefeller or the Duke of Westminster be? Can they talk of paltry billions?

Doom of King Alcohol

When Every Grog Shop in the Country Is Closed Forever

Some morning, between now and A.D. 1925, we shall awake to find that every cheap grog shop in the country is closed forever. How this thing is to be gained is the wonder. The American nation will be richer at the close of every year than it is now by more than $1,000,000,000, and the world will be richer by the same amount.

With the vast sum saved, how the comfort of the toiling masses will be increased, the thirst power will be translated to competence, their homes made hygienic and comfortable, industrial and scientific schools will be established for them and the unmitigated sorrows of their wives and children will be comforted.

The present time will be relieved of more than half their inmates, the insane asylums will be depleted, and feverish and defective minds and bodies. The world will then take a mighty step toward this should be coming.—Los Angeles Times.

YES! LIFT A CORN

OFF WITHOUT PAIN!

Cincinnati man tells how to dry up corn or callus. It lifts off with fingers.

You corn-pestered men and women need suffer no longer. Wear the shoes that cause the corn, and the corns will disappear. Cincinnati authority, because a few drops of freezone applied directly on a tender, aching corn or callus, stops soreness at once and soon the corn or hardened callus loosens so it can be lifted off, root and all, without pain.

A small bottle of freezone costs very little at any drug store, but will positively take off every hard or soft corn or callus. This should be tried, as it is inexpensive and is said not to irritate the surrounding skin.

If your druggist hasn't any freezone tell him to get a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house. It is fine stuff and acts like a charm every time.

It Might Be True

Proverbial inability of the British to understand American speech was illustrated again at Newport Harbor recently. Secretary Baker was on an inspection tour. In going from the camp to another he had to cross a stretch of water. A British cruiser was nearby and the commander, in an inquisitive manner, asked him if he was the boat flying the official flag. The secretary of war replied: "Thank you, sir, said the Britisher. 'Don't mention it,' said the American. Then the Britisher said: 'I am not sure, but I must say. The matter will be kept secret.' Is what he said.—The Argonaut.

Miller's Worm Powders do not need the after-help of castor oil or other purgatives. They are gentle, thoroughness, because they are thorough in themselves. One dose of them, and they will be found to be a powerful and effective remedy for the worm trouble by making the stomach and bowels unattractive to the parasites. A high standard of purity will be certain to exert most beneficial influences in the digestive organs.

STALLION OWNERS

Under the provisions of the new Stallion Act all stallions which stand or travel in the Province of Alberta hereafter must be inspected by Inspectors appointed by the Department of Agriculture. The schedule to be followed by said Inspectors in this district is:

Hawksdale,	April 15th, Afternoon
Bigstone	April 16th, Afternoon
Clemens	April 17th, Afternoon
Acadia Valley	April 18th, Afternoon

NOTE:—Morning inspections mean from 9.00 to 12.00 and afternoon from 2.00 to 5.00, except where otherwise specified.

It is essential that owners have their stallions at their respective stations, as indicated in the above schedule, at the time set, as inspectors cannot remain longer than the time specified in schedule. It would therefore be advisable that owners bring in their stallions the day before, especially where inspection has to be made in the mornings.

In the case of pure-breds, owners are requested to produce registration papers.

NOTE:—The Inspection Fee as provided under the Act is $5.00. Any owner who does not have his stallion inspected at the time the Inspectors are in his vicinity, and who wishes to stand or travel his stallion during the 1918 season, will be required to have his horse examined by the said Inspectors at his own expense, in addition to the above fee.

The Ford is Now Considered a Necessity for Large-Scale Farming

WHETHER you are doing work on a large scale, or a small scale, you endeavor to reduce the delays of your farm machinery to a minimum, and save time. A Ford will assist you in doing these two things.

If your tractor runs short of gasoline, the Ford will bring a few cans right to the spot and greatly shorten the delay. Or if you need a repair, or some new plow points, you can "run" the errand to town and back in one-third the time it would take with a horse and rig.

With a Ford you can supervise the work on your ranch much more thoroughly. You can get your mail and supplies oftener, and take more enjoyment out of prairie life. A Ford will do all these things and many more, and at the same time save you money.

The strength and endurance of the Ford has been proved the world over. It is equal to the western roads and the distances.

The Ford is the car for the Western Farmer.

Military Service Act

Important Announcement to All

EXEMPTED MEN and to the Public Generally

IN dealing with the very large number of claims for exemption brought forward for consideration in connection with Class 1 under the Military Service Act, it has occurred, as was inevitable, that as a result of false statements and difficulties put in the way of investigation, some individuals have secured exemption whose proper place is in the Army.

It is not the intention of the Government to allow these men to evade permanently their obligation to bear their part in the military defence of the Country and of the ideals for which we are fighting. To do so would defeat the purpose of the Act, and cause grave injustice to men in the second class necessarily called out to fill their places.

Exemptions Granted on False Grounds

It is, therefore, proposed to scrutinize carefully all exemptions granted to date in order to separate those which have been granted on false or insufficient grounds from those that are well founded.

With this object in view the various Registrars under the Military Service Act have been instructed to issue a series of questionnaires to exempted men. These questionnaires must be filled up correctly and returned promptly under penalty of forfeiture of exemption for failure to do so.

Exempted Men Who Have Changed Address

It is therefore important in their own interest that all exempted men who have changed their address since their exemption was granted and who have not already notified the Registrar of such change should notify him at once. Under the Regulations it is the duty of exempted men to keep the Registrar advised of any change of address, and failure to receive the questionnaire by reason of neglect of this duty must be treated as equivalent to failure to return the questionnaire after receipt.

Citizens Urged to Assist

In many instances information has been furnished by members of the public which has led to the cancellation of exemptions obtained by false or misleading statements. Further co-operation of this character is invited. The Government regard it as the Duty of all loyal citizens, not only to the Country, but to the men at the front, to assist in this way in securing reinforcements on a just and legal basis. Correspondence of this character will be treated as strictly confidential and will receive the fullest investigation.

CHARLES J. DOHERTY,
Minister of Justice.

Correspondence should be directed to J. M. Carson, Esq., Registrar under the Military Service Act, Calgary, Alta.

The brakemen grinned, because the hint was plain. It is said on Western railroads that when a conductor collects a fare he throws the money at the car floor and accounts to the company for as much as sticks there.

"Well," said the first man, "I guess we'll take our chances and you can get into the caboose. You'll find blankets and a bunk where you can lie down if you take off your boots and we'll dump you somewhere handy for catching the next east-bound."

Foster found the caboose comfortably warm. There was a stove in the middle and two or three bunks were fixed to the walls. In a few minutes the train was moving and went roaring past, and when the freight started one of the men gave him some supper. Then he got into a bunk and went to sleep.

He caught the next express going east, and on reaching Ottawa, where he had some time to spare, he expected the man he had helped would come, or send somebody to meet him. Although he wore the fur coat and stood in a conspicuous place, he was not accosted, and presently bought a newspaper. It threw no light on the matter, and when he walked up and down, considering if he would go to the police, this was perhaps his duty, but it looked as if the owner of the coat had not been molested. After all, the fellow might be an absconding debtor, and if not it was obvious that he had some reason for keeping his secret. Foster decided to let him do so, and went to choose a comfortable seat in the train.

When he arrived at Montreal he went to the Windsor as he had been told, but there was no letter or telegram waiting and none came during the day or two he stayed. On the evening before he sailed he was sitting in the large entrance hall, which is a feature of American and Canadian hotels, when he thought a man some distance away was looking at him over his newspaper. Foster only caught a momentary glimpse of his face, because he held up the paper as if to get a better look at the people were moving about between them. He thought the man was Daly, and after a few moments carelessly crossed the floor.

A man sat at the spot he had marked and the chair on both sides were unoccupied, but when Foster sat down in the nearest he saw the fellow was a stranger. Fearing puzzled him, since he did not think he had been mistaken. It was, however, possible that Daly had been there, but had moved off quietly. When Foster's view was obstructed, if so, he must have had an object for hiding, and Foster waited a few minutes before he went to the office and examined the guest book. Daly's name did not appear and he found that nobody from the West had signed the book recently.

"I wanted to see if a man I know is staying here," he told the clerk. "That's all right," said the other. "Quite a number of people have been looking for friends today."

Foster described Daly as well as he could, and asked if he had examined the book.

"No," said the clerk. "Nobody just like that had the register while I've been about; but now I think of it, a man who might look like the fellow stood by while another looked at the last page." Then he indicated a figure near the revolving door. "There! That's who he was with."

As the man pushed the door round Foster saw his face, and knew him for the stranger who had occupied the chair in which he had expected to find Daly. He thanked the clerk and went back thoughtfully to his place, because it looked as if Daly had been there and the other had helped him steal away. If his surmise was correct they might be trying to follow Featherstone; but he was, fortunately, out of their reach, and Foster decided that he must not exaggerate the importance of the matter. After all, Daly might have come to Montreal on business, and the retort of a Canadian hotel is something of a public resort. Still, he felt disturbed and presently gave the clerk the fur coat, telling him to deliver it when asked for. He felt it a relief to get rid of the thing.

Next day he sailed on an Empress liner, and on the evening after he reached England left the train at a lonely station in the north. It was not yet dark, and for a moment or two he stood on the platform looking about. There had been rain, and the air had a damp freshness that was unusual in Canada. In the east and north the sky was covered with leaden cloud, against which rounded billows were faintly marked. Rugged moors rolled in long slopes towards the west, where the horizon was flushed with vivid saffron and delicate green. Up the middle of the foreground ran a deep valley, with blue shadows in its bottom and touches of orange light on its healthy sides. There were few trees, although a line of black firs ran boldly to the crest of a neighboring rise, and stone dykes were more common than the ragged heath. Foster saw no ploughed land, and nothing except heather seemed to grow on the peaty soil, which looked black as jet where the railway cutting pierced it. Indeed, he thought the landscape as savage and desolate as any he had seen in Canada, but as he did not like same country this had a certain charm.

While he looked about a man came up. He was elderly and dressed with extreme neatness in old-fashioned clothes, but he had the unmistakable look of a gentleman's servant. Though there was a small car in the road, he was obviously not a professional chauffeur.

"You'll be Mr. Foster, sir, for the Garth?" he said.

Foster said he was, and the man resumed. "Mr. Featherstone sent the car and his apologies. He had to attend the court, being a magistrate, and hoped you would excuse his not coming."

Then he picked up Foster's portmanteau and called a porter, who was moving some changing milk cans to bring his bag.

"Never mind; I'll take it," Foster told him.

"As you like, sir, but it's perhaps not quite usual in this country," the other answered in a deprecatory tone.

"I suppose I ought to have remembered that," Foster agreed smiling.

They crossed the platform, and while they waited for the bag the man said respectfully, "Might I ask Mr. Lawrence was better when you left, sir? It was a disappointment to us when we heard he could not come home."

Foster liked the fellow. He was very formal, but seemed to include himself in his master's family.

"I've served Mr. Featherstone for thirty years, sir, and led Mr. Lawrence's first pony and cleaned his first gun. I've been a regular duty, sir, but he was the only son and I looked after him. If I say so, we were much upset when we heard that he was in."

Then the bag was brought, and as the car ran across the moor Foster looked at the land surface of the wet road. The country was flat and desolate, but they had no roads like this in Canada's West. Indeed, in Western towns he knew it was something of an adventure.

"I've served Mr. Featherstone for thirty years, sir, and led Mr. Lawrence's first pony and cleaned his first gun. I've been a regular duty, sir, but he was the only son and I looked after him. If I say so, we were much upset when we heard that he was in."

German Aims in Africa

Aiming at the Creation of a Solid German Wedge Across the Continent

In an interesting article called "The World Political Importance of German East Africa," the Cologne Gazette says quite candidly that Germany has for years been aiming at the creation of a solid German wedge dividing Africa from sea to sea.

The writer says that although Germany, by the conclusion of the treaty of 1911 with France, "apparently" made a final renunciation of the idea of a great colonial empire, she really aimed at the creation of a German-Belgian economic area in the Congo basin from the Indian ocean to the Atlantic. The rapid development of rail and water communication was "the visible expression of this largely conceived policy." Thus "at the eleventh hour" Germany was "deliberately exploiting her incomparable geographical position in East Africa," and her position constituted "a wedge between English claims to sole domination in East Africa and South Africa—a dividing and immovable wedge as long as England and Portugal—all these wishes will be realized only if by our battles in Europe we compel England to recognize us as an equal power, and to draw the necessary consequences in the future rearrangement of Africa."—From the London Times.

British Rule in India

The following is taken from a letter from the quartermaster-general in India to the general officers commanding divisions and independent brigades: "I am directed to point out that at present there appears to be considerable diversity of opinion regarding the number of buttons and the method of placing the same on the mattresses in use in hospitals. 'I am therefore to request that in future all hospital mattresses should be made up with fifty-three buttons placed in fifteen rows of four and three alternately. This could convince our readers that even India has at last grasped the idea of the war and is getting a move on.—Punch.

Future of the Airship

The Future Possibilities of the Airplane and an Interesting Study

With tens of thousands of young men learning the science of aviation, men who will become experts in the handling of airplanes under the most difficult of all conditions—war—it is reasonable to assume that after the war hundreds of these men will not content with the thrills of rapid flights through the air. They will want their airplanes as today millions of people throughout the world have their automobiles.

Automobiles, at first a luxury of the rich, and used largely for pleasure, have become one of the great assets and even a necessity of modern business in city and country. So, too, the airplane has already passed from the stage of being merely a means of spectacular exhibition. In war the airplane is as necessary as guns and shells. It is the great gift of imagination to foresee that the airplane will in future be a necessary commercial means of transport and communication.

Discussing the future possibilities of the airplane an exchange points out that the airship is not a war invention, but the war has discovered its utility for many of the purposes of life. A government advertisement in the United States shows that the regular conveyance of mails over certain routes by air is proposed. This is an obvious use of the machine, which has been for three years performing a like service in the war area. The speed of the airship is more than double that of the fastest railway train. It is not troubled by geographical obstacles. It proceeds without interruption from water to land, and from land to water. It can take the direct road over mountain and forest. Limitations of carrying capacity might interfere with the use of the airship, for heavy mail, parcel post and express, but this business could be handled for those who are willing to pay the price.

In the respect to safety there is probably little difference between the airship and the railway. Many machines are brought down in the war, but there they have an enemy trying to destroy them, and are engaged in enterprises known to be risky. Some are destroyed on the training ground, but these are handled by men who are learning, and are expected to perform evolutions required in war but unnecessary in the airship. The airship may be less regular. There may be days when navigation would be difficult, but by the progress of knowledge this defect would be reduced or overcome.

There are many civil uses to which the airship is adapted. Consider, for example, its value in prospecting exploration and surveying in a province like this. A mountain barrier could be practically effaced. Any point to be explored in the province could be reached in two or three hours, without climbing or struggling through woods. Rivers would be no barrier. Think how simple would have been the exploration of Africa by airplane compared to what it was and still must be by other methods. How easy it would be for a member of the Royal Flying Corps to visit Tibet. How simple will be the task of finding a hitherto unknown river in Brazil, if Roosevelt has left any to be discovered. These are extraordinary uses. The main business of the airship will be centred in the sphere of common duties. It is destined to be a great public utility, and the thousands of expert air navigators set free when the war is over will go about finding the machine its place in the scheme of civilization. They will be the largest class of men who have learned a new profession.—Regina Leader.

NURSING THE WOUNDED

It takes strength and courage to nurse the wounded. Every woman should make herself fit for war's call at home or abroad. Health and strength are within the reach of every woman. They are brought to you by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Take this medicine, and there's a safe and certain remedy for the chronic weaknesses, derangements, and diseases peculiar to women. It will build up strength, and invigorate every "run-down" or delicate woman. It assists the natural functions.

At some period in her life, a woman requires a special tonic and service. If you're a tired or afflicted woman, turn to "Favorite Prescription," you will find it never fails to benefit. Sold in tablet or liquid form. Send Dr. Pierce, Free, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., or branch, Bridgeburg, Ont. 10c for trial pkg. tablets.

Toronto, Ont.—"I found 'Favorite Prescription' a splendid tonic for women. Some time ago I became all run-down, weak, nervous and could not eat or sleep. Had severe headaches, pains in my right side. I took 'Favorite Prescription' and it completely built me up in health and removed all the annoying pains and aches."—Mrs. Thomas Graybill, 425 Front St. Niagara Falls, Ont.—During middle age, I began to go down in health. I would become dizzy, black spots would appear before my eyes. I also suffered with severe pains in the back of my head and my back would ache continually. I was most miserable when I began taking 'Favorite Prescription,' but by its use I came through this critical period in a good healthy condition. It is a splendid medicine for women at this time of life."—Mrs. W. F. Tarrant, 167 Bridge St.

A Determined Surrender
A really funny experience was that of the officer who came upon four Germans in an otherwise deserted stretch of trench, and, having previously captured his revolver, paused in some uncertainty as they came rushing at him, jabbering in chorus. Then he retreated rather precipitately to call for help to secure the Bockes as prisoners. But the quartette ran faster than he did, and, over his arm, proceeded to embrace him, to supplicate him by tone and gesture to accept their surrender. Although he marched in with dignified satisfaction at the head of his little bag, he did not hesitate to tell the story against himself.

The Outlook in Clothing

In No Case Should Any Material of Serviceable Quality Be Destroyed

The overwhelming importance of food supply and the immediate and urgent necessity for increased production and conservation to avert a world famine has somewhat dwarfed the seriousness of the situation in regard to clothing needs. That conditions are serious is only too true. It is perhaps not so obvious since our shops are replete to be plentifully supplied with large and varied stocks of boots and shoes, staple and fancy dry goods and all the many frumpies dear to the feminine heart. But the retail dealer is at the end of the line in textile manufacture. When his stocks begin to show depletion we shall indeed be in serious straits. It is to the wholesaler and manufacturer we must look to see what the future holds in this line and here we find that not only are supplies low but there is little hope of securing fresh ones. The manufacturer is too busy supplying government and military needs and the available supplies of raw material in wool, linen and cotton barely meet war demands so that there is little hope of there being much to spare for civilian requirements even if the factories had time to attend to them. The household should not overlook these facts and during the next few months when the family wardrobe is being inspected and overhauled in preparation for the coming season, every effort should be made to conserve material. The time has passed when a garment of good quality should be thrown away because out of date or somewhat worn. If quite incapable of being remodelled the best part should be saved to be used for children's clothes where even very small quantities can be combined into useful and attractive garments. If there are no children in the family pass the goods on to some other household which has them or send it to one of our charitable and relief organizations. In no case should any material of serviceable quality be destroyed.

Wilkins was quite the "black sheep" of the regiment, and was brought up before his commanding officer for breach of discipline for about the fifteenth time. The Colonel glared at him severely. "Didn't I tell you the last time you were up in the orderly room?" he said, "that I never wanted to see you again!" "That's quite right, sir," answered the culprit, "but the Sergeant wouldn't believe it!"—Vancouver Province.
